Early detection is still the single most effective way to beat breast cancer — the earlier, the better.

Digital mammography is here. The latest technology in mammography for the best possible care.

In that same study, which included more than 42,000 women, digital mammograms found cancers that traditional mammograms missed. Many of the cancers detected were the most serious, potentially fatal types.

Since the digital mammogram doesn’t need to be developed, you get results more quickly. With the click of a mouse, your radiologist can also enlarge and enhance the digital image, adjust the contrast, or zoom in on specific areas. This technology means it’s less likely you’ll need to come back for a second test. What’s more, your doctor can easily share your images to consult with others, for prompt diagnosis and the best possible treatment.
